RECORD PLANE BEGINS TO SHOW STRAIN AS FRAME BOLT LOOSENS

Engine Pumping Oil Is Latest Report

CHICAGO, July 3. (AP)—Indications that the record-breaking "City of Chicago," is beginning to yield to the strain of more than 531 hours were evident at Sky Harbor airport Thursday night. A bolt connecting the motor to the frame came loose, and the engine was pumping oil.

A bolt to replace the one which had shaken loose was hurriedly taken up to the endurance fliers.

Lieut. E. S. Moon who made a successful two-way radio contact with the "City of Chicago," at 6:01 central standard time, reported he saw a streak of oil on the ship which he said indicated that one of the cylinders of the motor was pumping oil.

A short time later an oil soaked shirt was thrown to earth by one of the Hunter brothers.

CHICAGO, July 3. (AP)—The "City of Chicago" glistened in the dusk and careened on into darkness over Sky Harbor Thursday night with the question of how long an airplane and two men can stay in the air still unanswered.

The plane, piloted by John and Kenneth Hunter, passed the 529th hour of endurance flying at 4:40 o'clock, Central Standard time, and by then had eclipsed the former record by 109 hours.

Any troubles were in the worn nerves of the flyers. The motor of the plane continued to hum like a new one.

Wednesday night newspapers were sent up to John and Kenneth by way of "Big Ben," the refuel-

REPORT AMERICAN MISSIONARIES ARE DRIVEN IN CHINA

American Legation Ordered to Protest; Are Hit With Sticks

WASHINGTON, July 3. (AP)—After receiving a report that American missionaries had been driven through the streets of Suiping, Honan, China with sticks, the state department announced Thursday the American legation at Peiping had been instructed to make "urgent protests."

A report from Frank P. Lockhart, consul general at Hankow, described how Rev. Thomas I. Lee of Minneapolis, Minn., and deaconess Thonea Sandland of Grygla, Minn., were paraded through the streets of Suiping and roughly handled by a local political organization.

Earlier, the department said, Lockhart had received a telegram dated June 24, from an American missionary at Sinyangchow reporting that on the morning of June 23 the missionaries had suffered indignities at Suiping.

The state department said the local organizations reported as responsible for the indignities appeared to be the propaganda bureau and the local branch of the Kuomintang.

Instructions have been sent the American legation at Peiping, the department said, that protests are to be made immediately to the highest military authorities now in control in Suiping. Further instructions have been sent, the department added, that even if Suiping is now in the hands of the northern faction, a protest should be made to Nanking, referring to the alleged responsibilities of the Kuomintang party organizations.

The officers had lain in ambush since Wednesday hoping to entrap some of the Moran gangsters who had been expected to call for the liquor. When none arrived, they decided to wait no longer.

The investigators said they had obtained records showing that a carload of whisky a day was being shipped to the Moran gang from Boston.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS; VET BILL IS PASSED AND HOOVER SIGNS IT

Members Moody As Session Ends; to Be Recalled

WASHINGTON, July 3. (AP)—Congress adjourned Thursday night, with the senate in the fighting, snarling mood that has characterized the almost 18 months of continuous session since the advent of the Hoover administration.

It ended at 10:37 with President Hoover just outside the senate chamber in the presidential room to which he came shortly before 10 p. m., to sign the last of the appropriation measures. He waited for some time while Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, flayed the Hoover farm relief and tariff policies, keystones of the administration's legislative accomplishments for the session, before the bill could be passed.

Nat until resolution of adjournment which was adopted earlier in the night by the house had finally been approved by the quarrelsome senate was there definite assurance that the close of the session which began last December was at hand.

President Hoover will immediately call the senate back into session on next Monday to consider ratification of the London naval agreement. While plenty of votes to assure ratification are in sight there is no certainty when the vote will be reached.

President Hoover quickly affixed his signature to the veterans relief measure in the presidential room at th capital within a few minutes after he had received it.

After the veterans bill was disposed of, the senate speedily gave final approval to the second deficiency bill carrying emergency funds to meet newly authorized projects.

Then came the last of the appropriation bills, that providing funds for the District of Columbia.

With this measure finally approved Senator Watson offered the adjournment resolution just previously received from the house. A roll call was demanded, but it won by a vote of 40 to 14 with nine Democrats, four Republicans and the lone farmer-labor Senator Shipstead of Minnesota, in opposition.

Young at Los Angeles.

It was placed before him through a decision by the state supreme court here on an application by Billings for pardon. No hint of the contents of the thirty page judicial opinion was given, but the governor said it will be made public simultaneously at Sacramento and Los Angeles executive offices as soon as a copy reaches the capital, probably some time Friday.

LAW COMMISSION GIVEN $250,000 AGAIN FOR PROBE

Amount Asked By Hoover As Approved; At First Was Turned Down

WASHINGTON, July 3. (AP)—By a vote of 37 to 22 the Senate Thursday gave the Hoover law enforcement commission another $250,000 to carry on its general study of enforcement of criminal statutes.

It thereby accepted the amount requested by the president and approved by the house in place of its previous provision for only $50,000 to limit the commission's study to prohibition.

Following the senate's earlier action denying the larger fund for a continuation of the general inquiry, Mr. Hoover served notice that the broader investigation would be carried on by funds obtained from private sources if congress did not provide for it.

Thirty-one Republicans, five Democrats one farmer-labor Senator Shipstead, of Minnesota, voted for the $250,000 appropriation while seventeen Democrats and five Republicans opposed it.

In a speech preceding the vote, Senator, Norris, Republican, Nebraska, urged the commission to hold public sessions in the future if it expected to add "force and effect" to its recommendations for legislation. The Nebraskan said he plannned to offer a resolution looking to simplifications of court procedure but had withheld it in the hope the commission would be of some help in this direction.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 3. (AP)—Governor Dan Moody of Texas Thursday signed a contract assuring the immediate construction of a free bridge over the Red River between Gainesville, Texas, and Marietta, Oklahoma, on U. S. THE WEATHER

Maximum temperature for Paris Thursday, 95 degrees; minimum 70 degrees.

Texas, generally fair Friday and Saturday. Light to fresh southeast to south winds on the coast.

Oklahoma, partly cloudy Friday and Saturday.

Parisarea Citizens Get Opportunity To Relive Days of Wild West Again

The citizens of the Parisarea will step back several years Friday and Saturday, when the rodeo is held to celebrate the Fourth of July. Although Paris has always been a part of Texas, we have not had the cowboys, cowgirls, bucking broncbos, and other appurtenances of the West that other portions of the state have enjoyed. However, all these will be present Friday and Saturday at the Lamar fair grounds.

Citizens of the Parisarea will have the opportunity, many of them for the first time, to see some real bronc' peelers in action. In the riding contests Friday and Saturday, regular contest rules will be observed. This means that the rider's spur rowels will be taped until there is no metal showing, making it impossible for the rider to hold with his spurs.

Another requirement is that for the first five jumps the horse makes, the rider must kick his mount five times on either side. One hand must be kept free at all times, and the other hand must not touch the saddle. There are several riders entered who are accustomed to riding 'em sitting up. Consequently, considerable interest has already been aroused over the prospects of a clash between some of the peelers and Midnight and Before Day, two of the unridden animals in the Naylor string.

Although somewhat tamer than the bronc riding, the steer riding is due to arouse interest, especially in view of the fact that 12 steers which have not had a speaking acquaintance with men for several months, are to be used in the contest. Many local citizens will get an opportunity to illustrate to their children how Dad used to ride 'em down in the Sulphur bottom.

A wild horse race is always interesting. There is no way of telling what direction a wild horse will decide to run. They have been known to run within a few yards of the finish line and then reverse. There have been cases also when such horses finish the race without their riders.

Another event, reminiscent of the pony express days, is the relay race. In this race, the rider must dismount and change orses three times during the race.

The same rule applies to the goat roping and calf roping contest that applies to the wild horse race; it is the unexpected that makes the event interesting. Some of the animals run straight, while others may not run at all.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the quarter-mile running races. Some well known local horses have been entered and all events are expected to be closely contested.

Following the rodeo contests Friday afternoon, Hon. Pat Neff, former governor of Texas, will make an address. In the evening, after the rodeo performance, there will be dancing in the coliseum.

In addition to the events mentioned, at the rodeo, there will be trick and fancy riding, roping and numerous clown stunts. It is by far the best rodeo program that has ever been planned for the Parisarea and a large attendance is expected from all nearby sections.

MANAGER OF RODEO

Here is Col. Byron Kelly, manager of the rodeo which will begin at the fair grounds at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Col. Kelly will direct the program from the hurricane deck of the full blooded Arabian horse shown with him in the picture.

ENDURANCE

ling plane. That started a storm.

Kenneth saw himself quoted as saying he was tired of the flight and that he wanted to land. As John put it in a note: "It caused plenty of trouble between me and him."

Kenneth did not complain that he was tired, said his brother, Albert, who with another brother, Walter, operates the refueling plane.

But John, the ground crew explained, was angry because his note had been made public.

Still another worry of the boys who hope to make their record long enough to stand forever, was news that a law suit involving the "City of Chicago" and directed against them had been set for next Tuesday.

"That would mean we would have to land Monday to get some sleep and bathe and shave" wrote Kenneth. "We want to stay up as long as we can."

So they suggested that Judge Michael Feinberg move his court to a 21-passenger plane next Tuesday and hear their testimony via two-way intercommunication radio.

Judge Feinberg put their minds at ease with a message that court would wait until they landed.

Still another difficulty of the day had nothing to do with the success of the flight, but it left radio fans disappointed. It was the third failure of an army radio plane to pick up a broadcast from the endurance fliers by dropping to them an extension microphone.

When the army plane returned to the ground, oficers charged their equipment had been tampered with. Their battery, they said, had been turned on during the night and had lost its charge.

The army radio engineers on the ground then reported they found a wire had been cut and its loose ends concealed in a box. The result of the alleged tampering was that John and Kenneth talked into a "dead" microphone.

Their short wave broadcast was to be picked up and rebroadcast by the Columbia system. For this radio service they are receiving $1 a minute.

Crowds continued to pour into the airport, and the roads leading to it were clogged with automobiles.

Newspaper men, photographers and news reel grinders Thursday were furnished tents by the airport. Wednesday night they received beds from a loop hotel and many of them slept under the starry skies with the drone of the endurance plane's motor to lull them to slep, if any.

The Social Lion At Plaza Today And Tomorrow

Gary Cooper's sweetheart of "The Virginian" and "Only the Brave" has a new "boy friend." His name is Jack Oakie, and he may not be tall and gallant-looking but he is the screen's youngest Wizard of Wisecrackery.

And that seems to count for something for Mary Brian in "The Social Lion," showing at the Plaza theatre today and tomorrow, because in the finals of the picture Mary and Jack co-operate in a great big kiss.

It's all about a young garage mechanic, a former enlisted man in the cavalry, who plays polo so well that he gains the stellar position on the society country club polo team of his town. But his success with the mallet makes him rankor for success with a snippy young society deb, and that's where he falls off his horse. In the end he has to admit that the plain little girl in moderate circumstances is the best little girl for him.

Jack Oakie of course is Marco Polo (himself) Perkins. Mary Brian is the plain little girl. And there is Skeets Gallagher to help fill in with riproaring wise-cracks whenever Jack is catching his breath after a particularly side-bustin' nifty.

New Era of National Civilization Forseen for America by Scientist

By Charles P. Stewart
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, (AP)—From the period of confusion and unrest through which it has been passing since the World war ended, is America just about to emerge into a glorious new era of national civilization?

"Yes," confidently answers Austin H. Clark, of the scientific staff of the Smithsonian Institute.

Naturalist, biologist, originator of a brand new theory of the development of life from its primal protoplasm, oceanographer, world traveler and author of a small library on the most highly technical subjects, discussed in a third of a dozen different languages, Mr. Clark is as versatile a savant as the country has to offer.

He bases his prediction concerning America's future on strictly scientific reasoning.

But note—

He does not forcast a glorious new international civilization; only a new American civilization.

"Compare our situation now," he suggests, "with the position in which the English found themselves at the end of approximately the same interval after the Napoleonic wars. The analogy is almost perfect. If history ever repeats itself, there is justification for the belief that America is on he eve of a repetition of England's experience.

"The British isles, for practical purposes, were as distinctly separated from the actual scenes of the Napoleonic conflicts as America was separated from the scene of the World war struggle.

"The English were affected by Napoleon's campaigns, but did not directly suffer from them; precisely our own case more recently.

"Great wars bring great changes in the after lives of the peoples who fight them.

"The pre-war existence never returns.

"The Napoleonic wars altered England's life completely, but the English were not prostrated, like their continental neighbors.

"On the contrary, war had stimulated their industries and commerce immensely; again, exactly as occured here, incidentally to the World war — and as doubtless would have occured in any event, but gradually and unnoticed by us had there been no war to hasten matters.

"However, the English social and economic machinery had been thrown out of gear.

"It no longer functioned, after the Napoleonic strife, as Englishmen had been accustomed to having it function. Everything was different from prewar days (which they had not expected) and they could not understand it—any more than we have been able to understand what has befallen us, here in America.

"The English groped uncertainly for a decade.

"The writings of the time show their thinkers' uneasiness. They could not realize, in the midst of what must have seemed to them like chaos, that a process of readjustment was in progress.

"Finally, automatically, it completed itself.

"The golden Victorian age dawned.

"Our American readjustment appears also nearly, if not quite, to have completed itself.

"Unless we are on the threshhold of an epoch of American achievement beyond precedent, in science and art and literature and every branch of culture as well as in trade and manufacture then there is not much practical value in studying history—for its lessons ought to mean something, to be worth memorizing.

"As for the remainder of the world?—

"Well it is hard to see such promise elsewhere, as America's.

"No doubt there will be various spots of prosperity. Japan for example, is developing into the eastern gateway to the Orient; Turkey into the western gateway, each by the good luck of its position. Most of the nations appear to be slipping backward, as America rises into the ascendent."

Readjustment Needed Governors Believe

ZION LODGE, Zion National Park, Utah, July 3, (AP)—That readjustment of economic conditions is necessary for the solution of the present unemployment situation was the consensus of the national governors' conference at a session here Thursday afternoon.

At the meeting today the governors also agreed that the immediate solution of the unemployment problem probably would be a shorter working day and week, but whether this could be done without reducing wages was a matter of some differences.

LOVE CHORTLES AT PRISON BARS IN LOCAL COURT

"Judge, here I is, and I wants to plead guilty," quoth a dusky damsel, as she marched into police court Thursday morning.

"Plead guilty to what, and who are you?" queried Judge Anderson.

"I'e guilty of bein' a vag," replied the negress. "Yo'all done got mah man heah, so I might as well be heah too."

The woman's "man" had been arrested a couple of days previous on a vagrancy charge, and at the time was busily engaged in washing windows and otherwise cleaning up police headquarters. Judge Anderson had promised the negro a "two-for-one" proposition if he would clean up the place, and he was doing a good job of it.

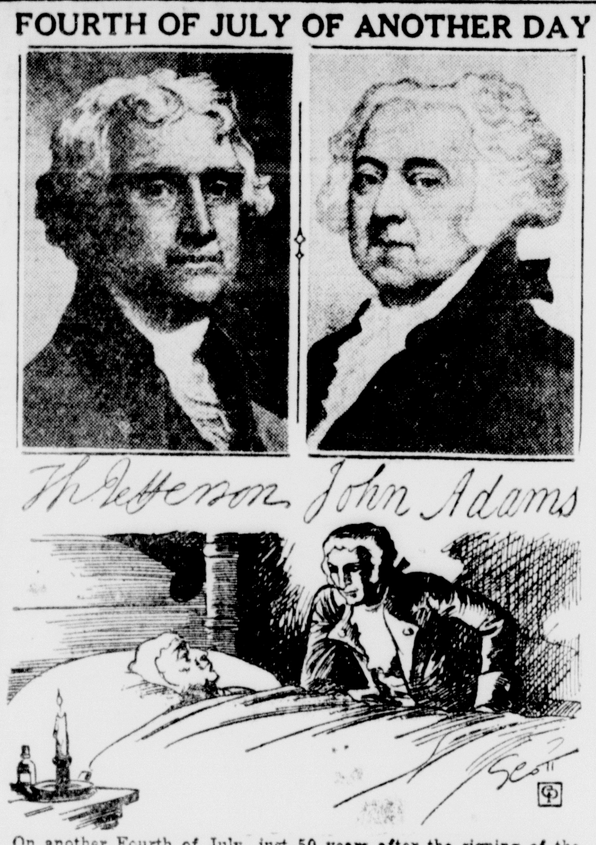

When told that his sweetie had plead guilty and "gone down" the man showed a row of gleaming teeth.

"Dat's some 'oman!" he said.

FOURTH OF JULY OF ANOTHER DAY

On another Fourth of July, just 50 years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, these two great patriots, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, died within two hours of each other. Although bitter political opponents, one a federalist and the other the champion of states' rights, they were close friends. A great celebration had been planned for the fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Adams then was 91, and Jefferson was 83, therefore both declined to participate since they were both too feeble.

BOSWELL-HAYNES PURCHASED BY PARIS GROCER CO.

Stock to Be Transferred; One of Biggest Deals Recently

One of the largest business deals of recent years in this section of the state was consummated here Thursday, according to an announcement by R. C. Lane, manager of the Paris Grocer company. Mr. Lane said that the Boswell-Haynes Grocer Company holdings had been purchased by the Paris Grocer company. The Boswell-Haynes company has stores at Antlers, Oklahoma and at Paris.

The stock of merchandise now carried by the Boswell-Haynes company will be transferred to the Paris Grocer Co., warehouse on or before August 1. Mr. Lane announced: and the Antlers, Okla., stock will be moved to Hugo and will be consolidated with the Paris Groc Co., stock in that city.

Following Mr. Lane's announcement of the purchase of the Boswell-Haynes stock, L. T. Boswell, manager of Boswell-Haynes in this city, stated the building now occupied by that firm has been leased to the Simmons Grocery Co., which will move into the building August 1.

The Boswell-Haynes stock at Durant recently was sold to the Williams-Eubank Co., of Sherman. Boswell-Haynes originally began business in Paris under the firm name of England-Haynes in 1917, and was changed to the Boswell-Haynes in 1925.

L. T. Boswell has been in active charge of the business since the firm opened in Paris, and he stated Thursday that it was his intention to remain in Paris, but had no plans for the immediate future.

Ken Maynard Due In "Lucky Larkin"

Ken Maynard has one of the most exciting roles of his career in "Lucky Larkin," Universal Sound Western drama which comes to the screen of the Grand Theatre Today and Tomorrow.

Maynard comes to the aid of a band of Kentucky homesteaders who are striving to hold their Western lands in the face of a reign of terror instigated by an unscrupulous stockman. There are romance, riding and fighting galore.

Maynard, with the aid of his famous horse, "Tarzan," goes through some hair-raising riding tricks. "Tarzan" has an important role in the picture, figuring especially in the comedy sequences.

Little Stomach Was Never Right

Mrs. J. J. Gilbert, who lives at 320 Regent street, is perhaps the happiest mother in Shreveport since her little son got over a spell of sickness which she hadn't been able to do anything with for months.

"My little boy was very puny and never had any health until we got rid of his stomach worms," says Mrs. Gilbert. "He suffered pains in his stomach, would not eat and never got out to play with the children. At night he would grit his teeth and mumble and groan. My mother told me he had pin worms and got a bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge. We gave it to him and at once he began improving, eating, playing and growing. Now he is well as any child could be. White's Cream Vermifuge has done just that much for him."

"Shouting The Battle Cry of Freedom!"

WE, the people, being mindful of the glorious heritage bequeathed to us by those heroes who fought and died to achieve and perpetuate a state of independence in the American Republic, call to mind now the duties and obligations devolving upon us, in addition to the privileges that we enjoy through the sacrifices of our forefathers.

WE are the sons and daughters of pioneers, the builders of a great Nation. Those who founded this Republic asserted the right of all men to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. We of today who live in a more commercial age are no less entitled to the blessings of independence than were the Revolutionary Fathers, and no more inclined to submit to the yoke of tyranny, either governmental or commercial.

THERE has arisen in the midst of our people, a gigantic threat to our independence, a monstrous menace to our well-being, a system of business that strikes at the root of American principles, and threatens to make thralls of free-born Americans by taking away the incentive of individual accomplishment and working to the end of making of our citizens mere cogs in the wheels of the monopolistic, oligarchistic foreign chain store system.

BELIEVING in the rights of the citizens to be free of the domination offered by this menace, hoping for a complete overthrow of the system that makes pitiful machines of men and women, makes community spirit a plaything and laughing-stock, makes profit outstanding above human contact and neighborly feeling, elevates the few to a position of power over the many, deprives freemen of opportunity for advancement by honest effort, concentrates the resources of the Nation into a small group of men and saps the life-blood of growing cities and communities—believing in these principles, trusting in justice, and working for a return of the day when this threat is not present in America, cherishing the traditions of the Fourth of July, and asserting our rights as citizens, we hereby declare that the United States is and of right ought to be free and independent of the manipulations of those whose effort is toward the enthrallment of the buying power of our people.

WE will stand embattled upon these principles until all the people are fully awakened to the danger that confronts us, till the tyrant of chain store domination is himself chained and enfeebled.

THIS menace has been tried and convicted by the jury of American intelligence, and the day is not far distant when the ugly head of chain store monopoly will be lifted no more above the horizon.

Red Cross Here Seeks Federal Help For Vets

Hospitalization for three disabled ex-service men has been secured through the effort of Mrs. Mary B. Johnson, executive secretary for the Lamar county chapter of the Red Cross, during the past month, and several other cases are pending before the veterans' bureau.

One man, a mental case, had become violent at times, and threatened injury to members of the family so that it was necessary to have him placed under proper care. He is receiving full disability compensation, his case being considered incurable.

Two other men, through injury to their feet were in need of operations and have been sent to Muskogee, Okla., to the government hospital.

A fourth case now pending, is a man suffering from a severe case of diabetes, and since he is not receiving full disability compensation and is unable to work, every effort is being made to secure hospitalization for him.

Another pressing case is that of a man who is affected by tuberculosis, some difficulty being encountered in securing a definite history of the case, to establish its service origin.

Refreshing Tea And Other Drinks For Warm Days

Brewing the perfect cup of tea is done by this method:

1. Allow one teaspoonful of tea for every cup.
2. Rinse teapot with boiling water.
3. Place the tea leaves in an earthenware strainer in an earthen ware pot.
4. Pour freshly boiled water over the tea leaves immediately.
5. Let the tea steep from three to five minutes according to the strength desired.
6. Remove strainer containing grounds and tea is ready to serve.

One teaspoonful to a cup. Do not reduce the amount. If you wish to decrease the strength of the tea, reduce the time of infusion to three minutes or less.

Many housewives make the mistake of using water from the hot water faucet. Water that has simmered or boiled for any length of time is fatal to good tea. An earthenware pot is essential. Metal pots set up a chemical change in the tea which is ruinous to its taste.

Making tea is a matter of detail. Follow this recipe and you will brew as delicious tea as ever delighted an epicure. Change a single detail and you will miss the flavor of perfection.

Cinamon Gardens Spiced Tea

Make a syrup by dissolving 1-4 cup of sugar in a little water. To this syrup add juice of 2 lemons and 2 oranges including shreds of lemon and orange rind, 1-8 teaspoon of cinnamon and a similar quantity of cloves. Pour a quart of furiously boiling water over 5 heaping teaspoonfuls of Lipton's Yellow Label Tea. Steep for 4 minutes. After straining tea leaves pour over other ingredients. After thorough chilling serve with mint leaves in each glass. Sufficient for 6 glasses.

Golden Glow Iced Tea.

Make tea as suggested, using one heaping teaspoonful of Lipton's Yellow Label Tea, or a one cup size Lipton's Tea Bag, for each glass desired. Fill the glasses about two-thirds full of chopped ice, and over this pour the hot tea. This may be served with either lemon or orange, sliced, or one teaspoonful of orange or lemon juice added to each glass of tea.

Liptonian Fruit Punch.

1 cup orange juice, 1 cup sugar, 2 cups Lipton's Yellow Label tea, (or a teaspoonful of tea to each cup desired), 1-3 cup lemon juice, 2 pints ginger ale, slices of orange and lemon.

Make hot tea as directed. Pour over the sugar. When sugar has dissolved add the fruit juices. Strain over a large piece of ice placed in the punch bowl. Add ginger ale and sliced lemon just before serving.

Running Afoul of This Ranger Is Like Signing Death Warrant

By Dub Furey

Bob Goss can shoot.

That is our unanimous opinion after watching him shoot playing cards in half, with only the edge exposed, shoot spots off playing cards and make powder of a small brick which was pitched in the air.

And all this he did because a desire was expressed to 'some day see him split a playing card.'

Thursday while talking to him, the writer said he would like to see him take a pistol turn it upside down and split a playing card. Not that there was doubt he could but the writer just wanted to watch him do it. Having read of men doing such things with pistols he jumped at the opportunity of witnessing such a performance.

So the playing cards were obtained and to the fair grounds went Mr. Goss. Placing two cards in the ground at a distance of slightly more than 20 feet the writer stepped back to watch.

The ranger's pistol barked. We looked at the card. There it stood, just where we had left it, but minus its top.

"Gollee" was about all we could say after seeing such a performance.

"Now we'll see if we can hit one with our gun upside down," he remarked.

Taking aim he fired, but his first shot missed. He leveled his gun (Twas upside down, remember). The gun spat again, this time cutting the card neatly in half. We gathered up the pieces and pocketed them.

Later he almost completely removed the figure from the ace of spades with five well placed shots from his pistol, connecting each hole that the bullets made. At our request he had previously placed a bullet neatly through the ace of hearts.

Choosing another gun—a beautiful, pearl handled automatic with a gold plated steer head on the handle—he split two other cards for our entertainment. By this time the crowd had increased, and all were expressing amazement at his prowess with a pistol.

"Find a brick. I have a few shots in my rifle here, and I'l like to see what I ca do with it."

We found a brick and tossed it into the air. Three times did we hurl the missle upward and three times it fell to earth with a mark on it where the rifle's bullets had struck. We got another brick, a common clay one, and pitched it into the air. About half of the brick was his reward on his first trial, so we pitched it into the air again. We do not know where it landed the second time. The last we saw of it was a small cloud of red dust floating earthward.

He then found a few of the clay pigeons used in skeet shoots, Taking one in his left hand, he pitched it skyward, pistol in hand. He was forced to shoot twice before he was successful in hitting it, but he broke it. And then he chose a brick, which he shot with his pistol. No doubt he would have been there yet shooting things if his ammunition had lasted.

But we musn't forget to tell you that he scored 99 of a possible 100 points with a pistol at 75 feet. But then he do that every day.

And yes, we have the playing cards and the target sheet for those who doubt our veracity.

TELLS LIONS CLUB OF POULTRY TRIP

B. Frank Johnson Was Speaker On Program Thursday

B. Frank Johnson, principal speaker on Thursday's program at the Lions Club, gave an interesting account of the poultry trip recently made by a number of citizens of Lamar and adjoining counties.

In speaking of the possibilities of producting other than cotton crops in Lamar county, Mr. Johnson pointed out that the soil here is far superior to that in the Ozarks region, which has made unusual progress in the growing of fruit and truck and in dairying and poultry raising. The soil in that section, Mr. Johnson said, was worn out and considered almost worthless a few years ago, but through the application of scientific methods of farming, the farmers are now producing incomes far in excess of those produced by the farmers of Lamar county.

Fruit crops, dairy products and poultry are marketed in such manner as to produce a steady income throughout the year he said.

Mr. Johnson declared that he believed the trip a most valuable one from all standpoints, and said that if Lamar county farmers would take up poultry raising and other lines of diversification as practiced in that region a long step towards the elimination of hard times would have been taken.

President Cam Hathaway in speaking of the work to be done by the Lions club this year said that he believed that the time has come when Paris must have an airport. He recommended that the club make the securing of the airport its chief project.

A report of the financial condition of the club was read by secretary David Rainey, which showed that the club had a very successful year, completing it with a substantial cash balance on hand.

Dr. R. D. Griffis was in charge of the program.

Visitors included, L. H. Spencer and Frank Tyre of Dallas and Dr. Clarence Miller of Paris.

COOLIDGE CELEBRATES GLORIOUS FOURTH TWICE

When Senators Raise Great Row Over Pilfering of Their Files It Means But Little Is Missing

By Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON.—If U. S. senators really are spied upon by secret service agents as they think they are, Moscow itself can hardly be much worse, as a hotbed of espionage, than the Capitol, and the neighboring big building where the members of the upper house have their offices, here in Washington.

Indeed, maybe Moscow is not so bad in some respects.

The Russian cheka has a reputation for neatness. From all accounts, the folk it has under obsrevation never know they are being watched until it comes time for the sleuths to pounce on them. Here the investigators of a suspected senator's correspondence files do not even bother to put his letters back where they belong, after examining them.

Moreover, there is only one cheka.

The person who is snooped on in Russia, if he discovers it at all, knows positively who the snooper must have been—a cheka operative.

In Washington it is liable to have been any one of several different varieties. Illustratively, "My best guess," Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, told me, just after his office had been pawed over, in the course of the fight he was waging against confirmation of Judge John J. Parker's appointment to the U. S. supreme bench, "is that justice department agents were looking for something. It is scarcely likely prohibition representatives were hunting for liquor, because it is well known that I am a teetotaler."

Still, the senator was not quite certain.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, was so much annoyed, during one period, by investigators, who actually carried away his correspondence before he was through with it, that his secretary finally left a note in plain sight, requesting at least the return of the papers.

They were returned, too.

Shortly afterward the entire missing batch of letters was found one morning outside the North Dakotan's office door, carefully bundled up and addressed to him.

Some share of the snooping, to be sure, may be the work of purely irresponsible prowlers, rather than those of the official type.

Nevertheless ,it is a coincidence, at any rate, that senators who are causing especial irritation to one administrative department or another are just at the height of such activities, particularly apt to discover evidences of clandestine visits to their suites in the Senate Office building.

The politically extremely orthodox Senator Smoot, for instance, who recently reported his quarters as showing signs of an unauthorized call between nightfall and daylight, is rather hard to imagine as the object of executive departmental suspicion. The turbulent Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, whose files were jimmied and ransacked a few days later, is not a bit difficult, however, to visualize as having upset plenty of departments. Even the comparatively innocuous Senator William E. Brock, of Tennessee, another recipient of some mysterious visitant's attentions, was on the anti-administration side of one of the current sessions's judicial controversies.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, to whom attaches the unique distinction of once having been the object of what looked extremely like an attempt by the snoopers to frame him with perjured testimony on criminal charges, probably has ample justification for believing that he has been spied on by nearly everyone in the espionage business—governmental and private.

THE SNOOPERS NEVER BOTHER TO PUT THE SENATOR'S PAPERS BACK WHERE THEY BELONG.

Other senators may imagine more or less of it.

Senator Wheeler can point to this experience of his own in which it came bodily out into the open and fought him with an indictment and faked evidence.

So it is not all imaginary, anywayway.

Accusations of official espionage are not at all new.

Senator "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman made them as long ago as the administration of President Roosevelt, at any rate.

Of course spying was rampant during the war.

Indications are that it never has thoroughly subsided since then. Naturally prohibition has added largely to the number of available secret agents.

Various senators tell me they surmise that the heads of the different systems not only spy on the lawmakers, but on executive officials generally and even on one another—that pretty much everyone of official consequence in Washington is card indexed, maybe by subordinates that he would be flabbergasted to learn are keeping tabs on him.

But does a snooper ever find anything worth while, prowling through a senator's correspondence files?

"Not if the senator raises a row about it," replied the Capitol veteran to whom I put the question. "The row means that he hasn't missed a thing that makes the slightest real difference to him.

"The public never hears about the other cases—if there are any."

Pension Money Is Held Up For Vets' Affidavits

AUSTIN, July 3. (INS)—The state is anxious to give pension money amounting to $62,500 to Confederate veterans and widows, if they will call for it.

About 2,500 checks for the pensioners have been held up because the veterans and widows haved to made out and send in necessary affidavits, it was pointed out at the office of Comptroller George H. Sheppard.

These payments were available July 1 when the monthly pension payment plan went into effect. The comptroller's office has mailed over $225,000 in 8,500 pension checks payable July 1.

The pension division emphasized the necessity of forwarding the customary affidavits, so that the money may be obtained. The affidavits will be required each month, it was said.

Fifty dollars each month goes to the veteran with a living wife. All others, veterans and wives, get $25 a month. Those residing in the Confederate homes get one-half of the amount to which they would otherwise be entitled.

Red Cross Here Seeks Federal Help For Vets

Hospitalization for three disabled ex-service men has been secured through the effort of Mrs. Mary B. Johnson, executive secretary for the Lamar county chapter of the Red Cross, during the past month, and several other cases are pending before the veterans' bureau.

One man, a mental case, had become violent at times, and threatened injury to members of the family so that it was necessary to have him placed under proper care. He is receiving full disability compensation, his case being considered incurable.

Two other men, through injury to their feet were in need of operations and have been sent to Muskogee, Okla., to the government hospital.

A fourth case now pending, is a man suffering from a severe case of diabetes, and since he is not receiving full disability compensation and is unable to work, every effort is being made to secure hospitalization for him.

Another pressing case is that of a man who is affected by tuberculosis, some difficulty being encountered in securing a definite history of the case, to establish its service origin.

Refreshing Tea And Other Drinks For Warm Days

Brewing the perfect cup of tea is done by this method:

1. Allow one teaspoonful of tea for every cup.
2. Rinse teapot with boiling water.
3. Place the tea leaves in an earthenware strainer in an earthen ware pot.
4. Pour freshly boiled water over the tea leaves immediately.
5. Let the tea steep from three to five minutes according to the strength desired.
6. Remove strainer containing grounds and tea is ready to serve.

One teaspoonful to a cup. Do not reduce the amount. If you wish to decrease the strength of the tea, reduce the time of infusion to three minutes or less.

Many housewives make the mistake of using water from the hot water faucet. Water that has simmered or boiled for any length of time is fatal to good tea. An earthenware pot is essential. Metal pots set up a chemical change in the tea which is ruinous to its taste.

Making tea is a matter of detail. Follow this recipe and you will brew as delicious tea as ever delighted an epicure. Change a single detail and you will miss the flavor of perfection.

Cinamon Gardens Spiced Tea

Make a syrup by dissolving 1-4 cup of sugar in a little water. To this syrup add juice of 2 lemons and 2 oranges including shreds of lemon and orange rind, 1-8 teaspoon of cinnamon and a similar quantity of cloves. Pour a quart of furiously boiling water over 5 heaping teaspoonfuls of Lipton's Yellow Label Tea. Steep for 4 minutes. After straining tea leaves pour over other ingredients. After thorough chilling serve with mint leaves in each glass. Sufficient for 6 glasses.

Golden Glow Iced Tea.

Make tea as suggested, using one heaping teaspoonful of Lipton's Yellow Label Tea, or a one cup size Lipton's Tea Bag, for each glass desired. Fill the glasses about two-thirds full of chopped ice, and over this pour the hot tea. This may be served with either lemon or orange, sliced, or one teaspoonful of orange or lemon juice added to each glass of tea.

Liptonian Fruit Punch.

1 cup orange juice, 1 cup sugar, 2 cups Lipton's Yellow Label tea, (or a teaspoonful of tea to each cup desired), 1-3 cup lemon juice, 2 pints ginger ale, slices of orange and lemon.

Make hot tea as directed. Pour over the sugar. When sugar has dissolved add the fruit juices. Strain over a large piece of ice placed in the punch bowl. Add ginger ale and sliced lemon just before serving.

Running Afoul of This Ranger Is Like Signing Death Warrant

By Dub Furey

Bob Goss can shoot.

That is our unanimous opinion after watching him shoot playing cards in half, with only the edge exposed, shoot spots off playing cards and make powder of a small brick which was pitched in the air.

And all this he did because a desire was expressed to 'some day see him split a playing card.'

Thursday while talking to him, the writer said he would like to see him take a pistol turn it upside down and split a playing card. Not that there was doubt he could but the writer just wanted to watch him do it. Having read of men doing such things with pistols he jumped at the opportunity of witnessing such a performance.

So the playing cards were obtained and to the fair grounds went Mr. Goss. Placing two cards in the ground at a distance of slightly more than 20 feet the writer stepped back to watch.

The ranger's pistol barked. We looked at the card. There it stood, just where we had left it, but minus its top.

"Gollee" was about all we could say after seeing such a performance.

"Now we'll see if we can hit one with our gun upside down," he remarked.

Taking aim he fired, but his first shot missed. He leveled his gun ('Twas upside down, remember). The gun spat again, this time cutting the card neatly in half. We gathered up the pieces and pocketed them.

Later he almost completely removed the figure from the ace of spades with five well placed shots from his pistol, connecting each hole that the bullets made. At our request he had previously placed a bullet neatly through the ace of hearts.

Choosing another gun—a beautiful, pearl handled automatic with a gold plated steer head on the handle—he split two other cards for our entertainment. By this time the crowd had increased, and all were expressing amazement at his prowess with a pistol.

"Find a brick. I have a few shots in my rifle here, and I'd like to see what I can do with it."

We found a brick and tossed it into the air. Three times did we hurl the missle upward and three times it fell to earth with a mark on it where the rifle's bullets had struck. We got another brick, a common clay one, and pitched it into the air. About half of the brick was his reward on his first trial, so we pitched it into the air again. We do not know where it landed the second time. The last we saw of it was a small cloud of red dust floating earthward.

He then found a few of the clay pigeons used in skeet shoots. Taking one in his left hand, he pitched it skyward, pistol in hand. He was forced to shoot twice before he was successful in hitting it, but he broke it. And then he chose a brick, which he shot with his pistol. No doubt he would have been there yet shooting things if his ammunition had lasted.

But we musn't forget to tell you that he scored 93 of a possible 100 points with a pistol at 75 feet. But then he does that every day.

And yes, we have the playing cards and the target sheet for those who doubt our veracity.

TELLS LIONS CLUB OF POULTRY TRIP

B. Frank Johnson Was Speaker On Program Thursday

B. Frank Johnson, principal speaker on Thursday's program at the Lions Club, gave an interesting account of the poultry trip recently made by a number of citizens of Lamar and adjoining counties.

In speaking of the possibilities of producting other than cotton crops in Lamar county, Mr. Johnson pointed out that the soil here is far superior to that in the Ozarks region, which has made unusual progress in the growing of fruit and truck and in dairying and poultry raising. The soil in that section, Mr. Johnson said, was worn out and considered almost worthless a few years ago, but through the application of scientific methods of farming, the farmers are now producing incomes far in excess of those produced by the farmers of Lamar county.

Fruit crops, dairy products and poultry are marketed in such manner as to produce a steady income throughout the year he said.

Mr. Johnson declared that he believed the trip a most valuable one from all standpoints, and said that if Lamar county farmers would take up poultry raising and other lines of diversification as practiced in that region a long step towards the elimination of hard times would have been taken.

When Senators Raise Great Row Over Pilfering of Their Files It Means But Little Is Missing

By Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON.—If U. S. senators really are spied upon by secret service agents as they think they are, Moscow itself can hardly be much worse, as a hotbed of espionage, than the Capitol, and the neighboring big building where the members of the upper house have their offices, here in Washington.

Indeed, maybe Moscow is not so bad in some respects.

The Russian cheka has a reputation for neatness. From all accounts, the folk it has under observation never know they are being watched until it comes time for the sleuths to pounce on them. Here the investigators of a suspected senator's correspondence files do not even bother to put his letters back where they belong, after examining them.

Moreover, there is only one cheka.

The person who is snooped on in Russia, if he discovers it at all, knows positively who the snooper must have been—a cheka operative.

In Washington it is liable to have been any one of several different varieties. Illustratively, "My best guess," Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, told me, just after his office had been pawed over, in the course of the fight he was waging against confirmation of Judge John J. Parker's appointment to the U. S. supreme bench, "is that justice department agents were looking for something. It is scarcely likely prohibition representatives were hunting for liquor, because it is well known that I am a teetotaler."

Still, the senator was not quite certain.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, was so much annoyed, during one period, by investigators, who actually carried away his correspondence before he was through with it, that his secretary finally left a note in plain sight, requesting at least the return of the papers.

They were returned, too.

Shortly afterward the entire missing batch of letters was found one morning outside the North Dakotan's office door, carefully bundled up and addressed to him.

Some share of the snooping, to be sure, may be the work of purely irresponsible prowlers, rather than those of the official type.

Nevertheless ,it is a coincidence, at any rate, that senators who are causing especial irritation to one administrative department or another are just at the height of such activities, particularly apt to discover evidences of clandestine visits to their suites in the Senate Office building.

The politically extremely orthodox Senator Smoot, for instance, who recently reported his quarters as showing signs of an unauthorized call between nightfall and daylight, is rather hard to imagine as the object of executive departmental suspicion. The turbulent Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, whose files were jimmied and ransacked a few days later, is not a bit difficult, however, to visualize as having upset plenty of departments. Even the comparatively innocuous Senator William E. Brock, of Tennessee, another recipient of some mysterious visitant's attentions, was on the anti-administration side of one of the current sessions's judicial controversies.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, to whom attaches the unique distinction of once having been the object of what looked extremely like an attempt by the snoopers to frame him with perjured testimony on criminal charges, probably has ample justification for believing that he has been spied on by nearly everyone in the espionage business—governmental and private.

The SNOOPERS NEVER BOTHER to PUT the SENATOR'S PAPERS BACK WHERE THEY BELONG.

Other senators may imagine more or less of it.

Senator Wheeler can point to this experience of his own in which it came bodily out into the open and fought him with an indictment and faked evidence.

So it is not all imaginary, anyway-way.

Accusations of official espionage are not at all new.

Senator "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman made them as long ago as the administration of President Roosevelt, at any rate.

Of course spying was rampant during the war.

Indications are that it never has thoroughly subsided since then. Naturally prohibition has added largely to the number of available secret agents.

Various senators tell me they surmise that the heads of the different systems not only spy on the lawmakers, but on executive officials generally and even on one another—that pretty much everyone of official consequence in Washington is card indexed, maybe by subordinates that he would be flabbergasted to learn are keeping tabs on him.

But does a snooper ever find anything worth while, prowling through a senator's correspondence files?

"Not if the senator raises a row about it," replied the Capitol veteran to whom I put the question. "The row means that he hasn't missed a thing that makes the slightest real difference to him.

"The public never hears about the other cases—if there are any."

Pension Money Is Held Up For Vets Affidavits

AUSTIN, July 3. (INS)—The state is anxious to give pension money amounting to $62,500 to Confederate veterans and widows, if they will call for it.

About 2,500 checks for the penisioners have been held up because the veterans and widows haved to made out and send in necessary affidavits, it was pointed out at the office of Comptroller George H. Sheppard.

These payments were available July 1 when the monthly pension payment plan went into effect. The comptroller's office has mailed over $225,000 in 8,500 pension checks payable July 1.

Fifty dollars each month goes to the veteran with a living wife. All others, veterans and wives, get $25 a month. Those residing in the Confederate homes get one-half of the amount to which they would otherwise be entitled.

MAKE THE SMALL TOWN ATTRACTIVE

ROXTON, a neighbor of Paris on the southwest, is solving the problem of the decline of the small town, which is said to be forecast by census returns recently made public. She is doing this by making the town so attractive that the people living there will not want to move away, and others will more than likely be brought to the place as a home.

The civic league, an organization that began work some months ago, offered nominal money prizes for the greatest improvement in home premises, for the best kept business house and best tended street. The Roxton people entered this contest, not for the money prizes, but for love of a contest dear to the heart of the average American, and the results speak for themselves.

Any other small town situated like Roxton can do the same thing. The town has natural gas, electric power and lights, and is close enough to Paris that a drive of a few minutes brings people here where they can get amusement, higher education and other things small towns can not support; and their home is maintained where there is plenty of room, no hurry and rush as in the city, and no taxes to pay for city conveniences.

Roxton people are wise, and the citizens of other small towns who follow their example will have no complaint when the next census is taken, that their people are moving away from town.

LEADING FIRE CAUSE

MISUSE of electricity and electric appliances ranks high in the list of fire causes. It results in an annual loss of approximately $14,000,000 in this country.

"Handy-man" installations and extensions may be found in hundreds of thousands of homes where they are a constant menace to life and property. It is a common practice to add unsafe lengths of lamp cord and to loop extensions around nails or other metal projections.

Blown fuses, instead of being replaced are doctored and made to work, in spite of the fact that they are no longer fuseable. During inspections in one city recently a bushel basket of pennies which had been used to supplement blown fuses, was collected.

Even the best of wiring wears out in time. Unless it is replaced by a capable electrician it presents a dangerous hazard.

Most cities now have examinations of buildings and property in order to remove hazards. However, these occur at long intervals. The solution of the problem is up to the public. When it permits amateur installation of electric appliances and fails to replace old equipment, it is unconsciously courting destruction.

MACHINE BEATS MAN

STRANGE and interesting that man can make a machine which can do something better than he can do it himself. Even so fine an instrument as the human eye can be outdone by a pair of mechanical eyes designed to match color. A needle pointer swings when colors are laid before these mechanical eyes. If the colors match perfectly the needle rests at zero on a scale. If the match is off, the needle swings one way for "too light" and the other way for "too dark." It registers differences in color invisible to the eye.

More and more we turn our jobs and our duties over to our new and astonishing machines. How much of our very personality are we going to give up to the monster?

WHEN YOU ARE 100

EVER stop to think what you will be like and what your attitude toward life will be when you are 100 years old? On your 100th birthday what will you have to say for yourself and for your contribution, if any, to your life and times E. P. Bradstreet, 100 years old, oldest living Yale graduate, is given a dinner by Cincinnati friends. Bradstreet, a friend of Lincoln, and the man who gave Champ Clark his first chance to study law, looks back on a great procession of days. He says:

"My life has had but one motive. I have striven to glorify God, to assist my fellows, and to be kind to animals." Equally interesting is what his wife says:

"He has always been the perfect lover, the perfect husband, the perfect father, the perfect host, the perfect neighbor. He has always done the best he could. Nothing worries him."

One reads over those lines and wonders how many of the hundred years have been added because he had "always done the best he could. Nothing worries him."

Who's Who—Timely Views

EXCESSIVE NOISE DECLARED HANDICAP TO WORKERS

By Ethelbert Stewart
United States Commissioner of Labor Statistics

NUMEROUS studies and experiments show that excessive noise reduces efficiency of workers, but business and industry are not to any great extent attempting to do away with noise.

Reduction or elimination of disturbing noises has been shown to result in greater output and fewer errors, yet industrial or business leaders, probably because they do not realize that noise impairs ability to produce, are doing very little to combat it. Even those persons who claim not to mind noises are affected by it.

There is at present considerable agitation against unnecessary noise, but it is not on the part of employers whose workers are affected. Much of the cry for noise abatement is raised by civic organizations, although some of the voices in the general protest are those of "cranks" whom any noise irritates. Of course, all noise can not be done away with or even decreased, but quieting treatment and insulation are often effective.

A 12 per cent increase in output followed a reduction of about 28.5 per cent in the noise level in an insurance office where the workers were engaged in a variety of machine operations, one experiment has disclosed.

It is possible to attain a lower noise level in work places if equipment and machinery are designed to produce only a minimum of noise in operation by the use of silent chains, noiseless gears, insulation of heavy machinery and sound-absorbing materials. Although special construction to minimize sound and the utilization of sound-absorbing materials is expensive, the results of quieting treatment usually justify the outlay.

An example of this special construction is a new office building built in New York City by a large life insurance company. Some 400,000 square feet of space has been insulated against noise. Extra heavy windows rest on cushioned bases and an air circulatory system allows most of the windows to remain closed at all times. Typewriters rest on insulated desk tops and ceilings and walls have been treated to absorb sound.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

THE COTTON SURPLUS

From the Greenville Herald:

ANNOUNCEMENT is expected from the Federal Farm Board that the 1,200,000 bales held by its agencies from last year will not be sold this year. In other words, the visible surplus is to be cut by more than a million bales. The same action already has been taken with respect to wheat purchased by the grain co-operatives last year.

If anything can be effective in securing good prices for cotton this year, that action ought to be the panacea. Of course, it is but a temporary expedient. The surplus still exists, whether it is turned loose this year, next year or the year after. But as a means of raising the price this year, it should go a long way. Naturally, it is to be expected that when prices do improve the co-operatives will be permitted to market the cotton. That will keep the price from going very high.

Still these things do not solve the cotton problem. It never will be solved unless we learn to diversify sufficiently to make the fleecy staple of relatively minor importance or until we devise some means of raising cotton more cheaply than it can be produced in India and Egypt, where labor and living costs are very low.

ALL VIEW WITH ALARM

From the Marshall News:

SENATOR Robinson of Indiana views with alarm the tragic position this country would be in should the Senate ratify the London Peace Treaty. He solemnly declares that the "treaty very gravely imperils the safety and security of the United States as the British were allowed to dictate the type of war vessels we are permitted to build."

At the same time Winston Churchill of England says: "The naval treaty is just another trick of Ramsey MacDonald to beat the life and spirit out of this country and make old England bow her head in the dust as a preliminary to America pillaging us of our resources."

The admirals of Japan are equally certain the treaty will cause the subjugation of that country to the United States. These jingoes of the three countries should get together and talk it over. Possibly not all of the three countries will be ruined by the treaty. In fact about the best reason why the treaty should be ratified is the opposition of the war lords in all the countries.

PLIGHT OF LINDY'S SON

From the Texarkana Gazette:

THE small son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A Lindbergh is going to have quite a tough row to hoe during his childhood.

To be sure there are probably at least a million boys in America who think that Lindbergh would be a perfect man to have for a father. And the youngster will have all the advantages that wealth and social position can bring him.

But there's one thing he have a tough time getting, and that's privacy. Many newspaper photographers would cheerfully pay a thousand dollars for a picture of the young gentleman, and the situation won't ease off much as he grows older. His slightest doings, for years, will be chronicled in the press at great length.

This is going to be rather tough. However, the boy's father seems to have learned how to endure the same sort of thing. Perhaps he can give the youngster a few tips.

Why shouldn't a boy go in debt for a ring his girl can show proudly? He might as well get a part of his training before marriage.—Buffalo Evening News.

ANOTHER TOUGH REFUELING PROBLEM

Guiding Your Child

MAKING CHOICES
By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

There is perhaps no attribute of personality so helpful through life as that of being able to make a choice and stick to it.

The world is full of people who are presented with alternatives and who insist upon trying to choose both. The ability to make a choice and accept it without grumbling is something which is learned early in life or not at all.

It is a trait which must be developed in the day-to-day situations which seem so insignificant at the time.

Does Johnny want an ice cream cone or some candy? He wants both, of course, but here and now is the time to teach him to decide which he wants most and to enjoy it without a look at what he can't have.

Mary may want to spend part of her weekly allowance on a pair of particularly beautiful silk stockings, and she also may want to spend the money on an excursion with her friends.

Only a thoughtless parent would make it possible for her to have both on that particular occasion, or would tolerate sulking because she couldn't have her cake an eat it, too.

The art of living is in part at least that of being able to make choices and, having made them, of permitting oneself no wishing for the impossible.

It is a simple lesson to learn, but a difficult one for parents to teach because it is so often in their power to remove the necessity for choice.

It is not, of course, necessary to create those situations which for the child to choose, but it is wise to allow him no escape from the problem when it occurs in the natural course of events.

A NEW YORKER AT LARGE

By Mark Barron

NEW YORK. (AP)—The Wall Street crash did much to sever the ties that this civilization as upon many men. It ruined the careers of many, but it released several from binding duties in order that they migrt satisfy desires they have never been able to fill.

For instance, there is a prominent broker who had been obsessed with the desire to commit suicide in a romantic setting. As he sat in his luxurious office he used to think of dawn among Southern pines or midnight on a tropical isle where he could make stage the heroics. But it seemed as if it would always be a dream for a web of ticker tape and duty to business held him to his Wall Street post.

Then the merket holocaust opened the way for him. His business was wiped out and only a small part of his fortune remained. At last he was free. Two weeks ago he went to Kentucky and Tennessee, there seeking a romantic spot among the mountains where he would achieve his dramatic suicide.

He couldn't find a place that quite suited his fancy, and so returned to New York. Now he has just sailed for the Basque Country seeking the scene of his farewell In his pockets he has $500 in cash. When that is spent, he will walk to some quiet glen in the Basque hills and end things.

However—in case he should change his mind about this business, he has deposited in Paris a $10,000 letter of credit for himself.

Literary Error

Pearl White, the heroine of movie thrillers, was visiting Ring Lardner on his Long Island estate. One day they were strolling along the shore at Great Neck and met George Ade, the humorist. Lardner introduced Miss White to Ade.

"I'm so glad to meet you," Miss White said. "I've read and enjoyed so much of your work."

"And what did you enjoy most?" Ade asked.

"I think I liked 'Silas Marner' best of all your writings," was Miss White's amazing reply

Later, Lardner explained that George Ade hadn't written "Silas Marner."

"Oh, it's my error," Miss White explained. "I thought you said his name was George Eliot."

Taxi Note

The most guarded possessions of Manhattan taxi drivers are the license cards which bear their picture, name and number. When they are working the card must be displayed in the cab where passengers can see it, but if the driver deserts his cab for even a few minutes he will take down the card and put it safely in his pocket.

The caution is easily explained. If the driver loses his licensed card he cannot have it duplicated, and so is barred from driving a taxi ever again unless he finds the lost card.

DIET and HEALTH

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"Dear Doctor: Could adenoids or enlarged tonsils, or worms, or food fermentation cause a bad breath in a child?" Mrs S."

Lulu Hunt Peters, M. D.

Yes, all of these things might cause bad breath, Mrs. S. If your child had adenoids that were obstructive, he would be a mouth breather; if he had worms, he would be passing them; and if he had intestinal upsets, he would be showing them.

The best thing to do with that child is to take him to a clinic or baby specialist for a check-up.

Mrs D.—From your description, it looks as though your little boy has some glandular trouble which might be helped helped by the correct glandular meidcation. The ordinary general practitioner, which I imagine is the type you visited, has so few of these cases that he usually does not feel competent to treat them. If it were in any way possible for you to take him to a large clinic like the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn., for instance, they would treat him free of charge if you have no funds.

Yes, I think it would do him more harm than good to go to school if he is teased so by the other children. You should try to teach him yourself, if you cannot afford a teacher for him.

I wish I might help you more, Mrs. D.

"My baby girl of three months has what the doctor calls a homatoma. It was a large lump and soft when I brought her home from the hospital, and then it started to go down, but it is still the size of a walnut. My doctor said it would go away. When I asked what caused the bump, he says it was caused by labor. Perple tell me it could only have been caused by forceps. Will the bump ever go away? MRS. K."

There are two types of swelling on babies' heads after birth. One, called the caput succedaneum, is a soft swelling of various sizes caused by the constriction of the birth passage around the presenting part. In prolonged labor this may be so large that the baby's head may look very much deformed, but it is nothing to be worried about, for usuallly, in a few days to a week or so, it goes down.

The other swelling, and it is what your baby has, Mrs. K. is called cephalematoma. This may also be due to prolonged labor or to instrumental delivery. It is caused by a little separation of the periosteum, or bone covering over the skull bones, and is composed of oozing blood and serum. This swelling may not appear for two or three days, and then grow to various sizes, and it takes very much longer to absorb. Very frequently they absorb without any difficulty at all, and evidently your doctor thinks this will occur to the one on your baby's head. However, if the hematoma doesn't absorb within a reasonable time, Abt recommends a slitting of the skin and expression of the contents followed by bandaging. Of course, this is a surgical operation and has to be done by a surgeon who is very particular about his sterilization; otherwise infection can take place. (Abt is of the opinion that this should be done oftener than it is.)

If you find your baby's hematoma doesn't go down after a while, then I suggest you ask your doctor to have a consultation with a surgeon about it

Mrs. Gertrude Bennett, wife of A. G. Bennett, died at the infirmary after having been a patient there several days.

Watermelons were on sale at some of the stores, having been shipped in from the south. They were high priced.

The fourth was marked with a parade of the Paris battery and other organizations and an address by Bob Shuler, followed by races at the fair grounde.

A Paris committee returned from Talihina where a meeting to organize the Lake to the Coast Scenic Highway was held. E. C. Bracken of Paris was elected president of the association.

Backward Glances

By A. W. NEVILLE

One feature of the old numbers of the Clarksville Standard which I have been looking over is the lack of what we call local news. The entire contents seem to be political announcements and speeches and matter connected with government at Washington and Austin.

One exception is in the issue of July 26, 1862, in which the Standard says: "For the first time in several years Clarksville is going through a summer without beef, although the prairies all around are full of it, and plenty of buyers in town. Is everybody too rich to take trouble to kill or is there a want of energy?" Evidently the people were living on pig.

In the same paper is a notice from W. B. Sims, provost marshal of Red River county, appointed by Gen. H. E. McCulloch, who states that he will enforce the regulations promulated by the general. The first of these is:

"The sale of intoxicating liquors to any person whatever except for medical purposes, and upon the written certificate of a regular physician or surgeon, or the written order of the officer commanding the nearest military post or camp, is strictly forbidden. Any infringement of this rule will be punshed by confiscation of all liquor belonging to the seller. No evasion of this rule will be permitted—the liquor shall neither be sold nor given away except upon such order or certificate as herein prescribed." So they had prohibition when necessary in the early days.

Editor DeMorse was a mustering officer it appears, nad in this paper he has a notice that John W. Wooldridge is his authorized agent, during his absence from home, for the transaction of all business. Another notice signed by Col. DeMorse says that the several companies composing the regiment of cavalry mustered into service by him will drill two days each week on days to be designated by the captains, until further orders

An order of Brigadier General P. O. Herbert, at military headquarters in San Antonio, dated July 1, 1862, says "Confederate money shall be received at par for all purchases and debts due. Persons refusing shall be arrested by the Provost Mrashal and brought before the nearest military commission for trial."

A WASHINGTON BYSTANDER

By Kirke Simpson

WASHINGTON, (AP)—So far as the prohibition aspect of the New Jersey republican senatorial primaries is concerned, things haven't changed much. New Jersey is still wet.

So the only very surprising thing about the Jersey vote in a non-presidential year is the size of Mr. Morrow's victory. That was not expected by most Washington political dopesters

New Type

It serves to launch the quiet mannered, small statured and modest Morrow into the political turmoil under happy auspices.

Even before he displayed unsuspected abilities as a campaigner and vote getter, speculation was rife as to whether his belated swing to political life might not mean that a new figure for high office fective, quiet, go-getter. He's a was arising.

Morrow has always been an enew type to politics in a way.

On the very night when retprns from the primaries were coming in, Morow was describing himself to an audience in Newark as formerly "a somewhat inconspicuous member of a rather conspicuous business house and since then an amateur diplomat."

That certainly is modest enough to satisfy the most exacting taste, particularly when you stop to note that the "conspicuous business house" referred to was the house of Morgan and the achievement of the amateur diplomat was swift tranquilization of previously dangerously disturbed American-Mexican relations.

To pass so lightly and gracefully over all that is not the usually accepted idea of what politicians have to say of themselves.

Until November

Some of the Bystander's Washington newspaper colleagues have been nosing about in Jersey, seeing what they could see as to November prospects. They seemed to think Morrow's election over his vigorous, hard-hitting democratic rival was not necessarily assured. That was before the primary, however.

It is a long time to November, however, politically speaking And the New Jersey campaign doubtless will command as much public attention as did the recent primary.

Regardless of what may happen in that connection, Calvin Coolidge certainly started something when he drafted his old college chum to help solve aviation problems of his administration.

That actually was Morrow's political debut.

Cubs Can Play Ball In Day, Too; Down Buffs

HOUSTON, July 3. (AP)—Del Pratt's Waco nighthawks proved Thursday afternoon they also can play baseball in the day time. Behind the masterful pitching of long Bill Harris, they hustled their way to a convincing 5 to 2 verdict over the Houston Buffs. The Houston attack was weakened by the loss of "Tony" Kaufman, who likely will be out of the lineup for a week or ten days. While boating Thursday afternoon on Lake Waco, Kaufman was struck in the eye by the cranking rope of an outboard motor.

Indians Win Ten Round Battle From Exporters

BEAUMONT, July 3. (AP)—Beaumont and San Antonio celebrated the Glorious Fourth a day early Thursday afternoon when they crowded everything known to baseball in a wild ten inning game. Indians won, 9 to 8. Skipper Burns juggled his five pitchers wisely as the Redskins scored a run in the tenth to nose out the Exporters who had tied it up their half of the 9th. Hamilton socked two homers, his second coming in the ninth with a mate aboard that put the tribe out in front. Holley also socked a homer.

Jones Heads For Minneapolis To Defend Golf Title

NEW YORK, July 3. (AP)—Bobby Jones Thursday went away from the roar of Manhattan, with father Knickerbocker's rousing welcome still ringing in his ears, headed for the comparitive quiet of a golf course over which he will defend his open championship of the United States.

The world's most famous golfer entrained at 2 p. m. (EST) for Minneapolis. His plans included a stop in Chicago Friday and Saturday. He will not see the Interlachen course, scene of the 1930 championships until Sunday.

Bobby was not disturbed as he left New York. Although Pennsylvania railroad officials, at his insistant request, held the Broadway Limited two minutes in a vain hope that Cyril J. H. Tolley, former British amateur champion, would put in an appearance, the train finally had to leave without him.

As the Pennsylvania train pulled out a dozen blocks away, Tolley was waiting at the Grand Central station wondering why Bobby and his traveling companions failed to appear for the imminent departure of the Twentieth Century Limited.

Tolley will rejoin Jones in Chicago Friday Morning.

Other Americans Play Today; Moody-Ryan Meet In Singles Finals

WIMBLEDON, England, July 3. (AP)—The two strongest doubles teams in Europe swept into the semi final round of the British tennis championships Thursday and Friday they will clash with two powerful combinations of young American Davis cup players for the right to enter the finals.

Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon of France eliminated Bill Tilden and his Dutch partner, Hang Timmer 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, in one quarter final. In the other, Dr. J. Colin Gregory and Ian G. Collins, Britain's best doubles pair overcame a French team of Jean Borotra and Christian Boussus, 9-7 6-3, 6-2.

America's surviving representatives in this phase of the tournament won their quarter final matches on Tuesday.

In the semi finals Friday, Cochet and Brugnon will meet the United States champions, George Lott, Jr., of Chicago, and John Doeg, Santa Monica, Calif., and Gregory and Collins will oppose John Van Rye, East Orange, N. J., and Wilmer Allison Austin, Texas, who beat them in the final here last year.

Another feature attraction will be the women's singles final between two Americans—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, defending titleholder, and Miss Elizabeth Ryan.

Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan, partners and favorites for the doubles title, reached the final in that division of play as well by defeating Madame Henrotin and Mademoiselle Jeanne Sigart, Belgium, 6-2, 6-0, Thursday.

In an uphill battle against a strong English team consisting of Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall and Betty Nuthall the young American combination of 17-year-old Sarah Palfrey, Boston, and Edith Cross, San Francisco, finally prevailed, 4-6, 10-8, 6-3.

This victory carried Miss Palfrey and Miss Cross into the semi-finals where Friday they will encounter Misses Feltham and Heeley of Britian for the right to meet Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan for the title.

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

CHAPTER 18

She recognized the more prominent names among the men: Bert Ketchum, the sculptor, who had achieved such spectacular fame only a year ago, with his clever and flaring interpretations of "life's seven ages," which had won the Trimball medal in their class. Clara Dee had especially remembered them because she had gone with the art classes at school, to see the figures on exhibition at the museum, and the teacher had praised them with such unusual enthusiasm. His favorite model, Giola Vail, small and exquisitely formed, with enormous brown eyes and golden hair, clung possessively to his arm, avoiding the others with an air of affected shyness.

There was also "Ronny" Mallory, the portrait painter of society's elite. Clara Dee was very glad that she had not met him before nor had him do her portrait. No doubt had she been at home this summer and her father had lived, he would have had it done.

She was disappointed in Zaza Roth, the prominent pastel artist. Tall and lank as a birch tree, with a dark, muddy complexion, she was dowdily dressed in a drab colored gown which was over-ornamented and served only to increase her drabness. An attractive elderly man with a neatly clipped grey moustache, followed her about as attentively as if she were quite the most fascinating woman present. There were many less celebrated among the guests, but they all talked and danced together with an easy familiarity.

Ivan insisted upon the first dance with Clara Dee and she instantly forgot her partner in the ecstacy of the rythm. Her feet were as light as the floating chiffon of her gown and she was happily unaware of the intensity with which the artist watched her as he deftly guided her about the floor. The great, highceilinged room, with its priceless Gobelin tapestries, decorations and exotic incense which hung heavy on the air and enveloped them like an invisible mist, mingling with the perfume worn by the women, cosmetics, and the odor from huge urns of roses, snap-dragons and long stemmed asters scattered about. Once more she moved where people lived for beauty and pleasure and her despair of the past month was only a hideous dream. She hoped she would not waken suddenly from this happy one.

"Are you one of the fairies come to earth with us mortals for just an evening?" Ivan whispered close to her ear.

She smiled dreamily.

"I think I shall have every dance with you lest you disappear suddenly while I am away from you," he continued. Then a sudden fire in his eyes frightened, yet fascinated her. When one has grown to womanhood on adoration, and indulgence and flattery it is not easy to exchange them for criticism, suspicion and dislike. Stuff of heroes, perhaps, but unnecessarily melodramatic.

"I think I shall have every dance with you."

"I'm no end indebted to Estelle for bringing you," he told her later in the evening. "She knows pretty well what I require in a model, but it's all luck that she ever found you."

"But I don't think I should care to be a model," Clara Dee objected timidly. "I only came to the party to please Miss Kay."

"And it pleases me more than I can tell you. I dread to think of how my work would suffer in the future without you now that I have seen you. Estelle has been attempting to describe you to me, but I paid little heed. There is beauty and beauty, you know, but yours is a very unusual type. Do you think it would be sporting of you to refuse me the coveted opportunity of my career, to deprive the world of such work as would result from the inspiration you could give me?"

Well—when he put it that way. Why! she was even accomplishing something for humanity! She wondered for a moment what Winfield would say if she were to accept such a position. Imagining what he would say, she hastily rejected the thought, for it made her feel uncomfortable. But what matter—would he rather she starved? He wasn't helping her in any way to solve her problem—a very serious problem just at present. This wasn't just the work she would choose for a career, yet it was an honorable one and quite as important as many others. Of course, there were all kinds of models just as there were all kinds of girls doing other work.

In the end it was arranged that she should come to work the next day, and for a few hours each day, she would receive the same amount that she had been paid at the Star grocery for several days of menial labor. Ivan drove the girls home in his own car. Clara Dee sank into the embracing luxury of the upholstery with a sigh of familiar contentment.

Her room seemed rather to have shrunk during her absence and appeared more shabby than she had believed it to be. Having lived in it for so long without entering more beautiful rooms, she had grown accustomed to its homely shelter and had really been grateful for it. Contrasting it with the splendor she had just quitted, was as comparing a pebble with a mountain of grandeur.

"How very little I ever appreciated my luxurious life," she reflected, carefully hanging the orchid chiffon in its protecting slip. Her thoughts were tumultous. In a way, she was happy to again have the assurance of an income, yet not so happy as she had been in her anticipation of working at the Star. There was something which dulled the keen edge of her triumph in securing the position.

"But I shall enjoy it, I'm sure. I haven't even tried it out yet, so I may like the work better than I expect," she assured herself.

The hours were more too her accustomed routine in that other world—it seemed to her now another world—though only a few blocks removed from her present surroundings. She took a taxi uptown the next morning and arrived as freshly attractive as if her ensemble suit were not of last season's model.

Ivan greeted her with a businesslike crispness, which was quite as contradictory to his manner of the previous evening as were the soiled smock he wore over a soft shirt open at the throat and the linen trousers, to his immaculate evening clothes.

"This is your dressing room," he indicated a small room and bath—like the private suites now provided in the modern theatres for actors and actresses, in striking contrast to the dingy holes in the wall which were once deemed adequate—off the studio. "And please put this on." He handed her a richly embroidered robe. She hurridly removed her clothes and returned to the sky-lighted room and was directed to a dias in the center of the studio. He busied himself at his easel with paints and brushes.

Then directed her position "Now just drop your robe and stand as you are," he commanded, not looking up.

She stared at him without moving. He looked up expectantly, frowned slightly, and repeated the order.

"Why then—I should have on nothing!" she exclaimed with unconcealed dismay.

"That is exactly what I want, Miss Forester, a nude study," he assured her with a disarming smile.

"But I thought you did magazine illustrations. Surely, they do not require nude studies. I supposed you wanted naturel poses of everyday people."

"That is the way they appear in the final production, but I get the best results with my most difficult poses by working from the nude form and adding the draperies to please my fancy. The line of the figure is of most importance." He was very patient and impersonal with his explanations and had not moved from his expectant position at the easel, as if he were very sure that he would get just what he desired.

"Oh!—I see," her words were little gusty gasp. "You should have explained your requirements to me more fully last night. I'd rather—please say it isn't too late nor unfair of me to change my mind." She held out her hands in a gesture of mute appeal. Wearing gowns which could be tucked into a small hand-bag, with daring slashes where the draperies fell back—"a robe of samite without price that more expressed than hid her," clung about her lissome limbs," like the wily Vivien, a one-piece bathing suit or beaded trappings in imitation of an Indian bayadere at a fancy dress ball, were one thing—to pose before a man whose piercing eyes could fairly scortch her sensitive flesh, was quite another.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other disease."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. R. J. Murphy.—Adv.

TOTS ARE LOVE MURDER VICTIMS

These two children are the innocent victims of the tragedy that took the life of their mother and places their father in the shadow of the electric chair. They are the two sons of Tilby Smith and his wife, of Ashtabula, O., who was shot by Smith's paramour, Mrs. Maude Lowther, 22. Smith attacks Mrs. Lowther's confession in which she says he helped her plan the murder and "put his wife on the spot" for her. The children, Donald, three months, and Frederick, three and one-half years, are with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Smith, above.

MARKETS

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, July 3, (AP)—Cotton was quiet Thursday and trading was restricted largely to evening up of commitments in advance of the holidays and the government's acreage estimate next week. Cables were lower than due and some additional July notices were issued so that prices opened 2 to 6 points down and continued to ease off slowly despite occasional brief rallies until the price level was 9 to 11 points under yesterday's close.

A private authority estimated the acreage in cultivation at 45,775,000 acres, a decrease of 2.7 per cent.

New York Cotton.

NEW YORK, July 3, (AP)—Trading in cotton here Thursday was attributed largely to evening up for over the holidays, but relatively easy cables and favorable weather reports brought in some scattered selling as well as realizing, and the market was generally lower.

Chicago Grain.

CHICAGO, July 3, (AP)—Wheat pouring into market centers almost twice as fast as a year ago spelled lower prices Thursday in big letters. The domestic winter wheat harvest, especially in the west and southwest, was reported as making rapid progress, and export demand appeared to be temporarily at a standstill, affording no outlet for the big surplus of last year's wheat on hand, let alone the new wheat announced Thursday as almost 200,000,000 bushels less than for the 12 months previous.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsteady at the day's bottom level, 1 3-8 to 2c a bushel lower than Wednesday's finish. Corn closed 1-4 to 7-8c down, oats 1-4 to 3-8c off.

Fort Worth Livestock.

FORT WORTH, July 3, (AP)—A light supply of livestock Thursday sold steady with the week's decline on certain classes. Steers made up the bulk. Figures called for 900 cattle, 600 calves, 650 hogs and 1400 sheep. Plain cattle in the southern division sold at 5.50 with some plain cattle north at 5.85.

A load of good slaughter yearlings sold at 10.75 with some fairly good yearlings due to clear around 7.00.

Not many cows offered. Canners seemed to sell to a little better demand with a very few thin ones at 2.50 with others at 3.00 and 3.25.

Few good weighty calves made 8.00, and a load of calves sold at 7.50 with other loads down to 5.50 and some light calves due to sell around 8.00.

No rail hogs offered. Truck hogs up to 8.75 or steady.

NEW YORK, July 3, (AP)—The bears touched off a few firecrackers under the stock list Thursday. The explosions were not strong enough to shake the market, but it did settle a bit and closed for the three day vacation with prices of favorite shares 1 to 2 points net lower. Larger losses in special stocks were fairly numerous.

Trading was very quiet and quite professional, especially in the morning. Sales for the first half hour totaled only 134,500 shares, the smallest since November 22, 1928, when the stock exchange began keeping official record. Quotations moved indecisively until around noon when the professional short interest became more venturesome and put out some new lines to hold over the holiday, shoving Du Pont, May Department Stores, Spiegel May Stern, Gillette, Celotex, Timken Roller Bearing, Atlantic Coast Lines and a few others to new lows for the year. The chemical stocks were also weak.

FT. WORTH PATIENT FEELS GREAT AGAIN

Public Stenographer Finds Relief From Indigestion Through Argotane

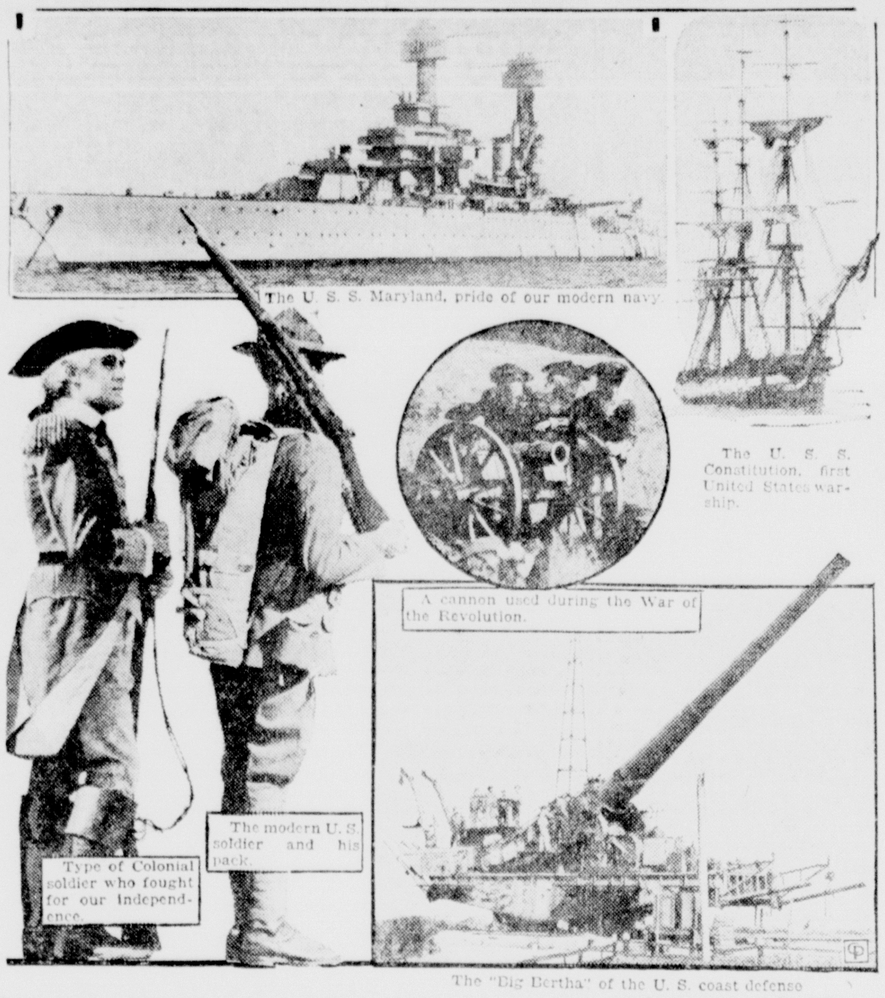

"I really feel better than I have in two or three years, since Argotane has relieved me of a severe case of indigestion," says Miss Pat Taylor, of 2601 Ave. M, Fort Worth Texas, a popular stenographer.

"My case of indigestion was the cause of a great deal of suffering," she continued. "The spells came on almost every time I ate, and they were closely followed by gas formations. The food formed into a hard ball in the pit of my stomach, and the gas pressed upward until it felt as though it were trying to push my stomach through my throat. It surely was uncomfortable. I was always tired and worn out. In fact, I was just as tired when I got up in the morning as I had been when I went to bed.

"A friend of mine had been taking Argotane and when I heard of the good results she was obtaining, I started the treatment myself. Relief came to me immediately, for in just a few days, I began to feel better. The tired, worn out feeling began to leave me and my food no longer hurt me, and now I can eat anything I want without suffering from indigestion or gas formations. I have so much more pep and energy and everything, and Argotane did it. I am very glad to recommend it."

Genuine Argotane may be bought in Paris at the Palace Drug Store —Adv.

FOURTH OF JULY EMPHASIZES 1776-1930 CONTRASTS

These photos of Revolutionary times afford a striking study in contrasts. In the days of Paul Revere and the Minute Men the wooden frigate Constitution was considered the most formidable vessel afloat; now, alongside the modern battleship, U. S. S. Maryland, it seems harmless, indeed. The Revolutionary soldier in his white wig and brilliant trappings cuts a fine figure, while his modern counterpart, the doughboy, discards bright colors for the drab khaki which conceals him from the enemy. When George Washington was commander-in-chief of the Colonial days the cannon, shown above, was relied upon for the heavy bambardment, yet it looks like a toy when contrasted with a 14-inch "Big Bertha" at Fort MacArthur, San Pedro, Cal.

Times Roll By But July Fourth Celebrations Vary Little From 'Old Days'

"Tell you about the first Fourth of July I remember," said the oldtimer, "and what kind of celebration there was. "Well, les see, it must have been about forty years ago. There wasn't much of a celebration—just a big picnic and round up. You know in those days it was customary for all the people to come and bring dinner to the political meetings. July 4 used to be an important day for the candidates and for the people, too.

"All the women folk worked for four or five days ahead getting ready for the big event. They had every kind of cake there was baked, and pies—there were all sorts of 'em. My mother always worked herself down so getting things fixed for the picnic she could hardly enjoy it.

"We left home about 5 o'clock in the morning in a wagon bedded down with loose hay and covered with a wagon sheet, bound for the picnic grounds. When we got there all the women gathered around and showed off their cakes and pies, while the men discussed the crop prospects.

"Candidates came up and talked to some of the men and usually petted the children. Every child looked like its father if it were near its dad and, 'Why, Mrs. Brown, I didn't know little Ezra looked so much like his good-looking mother until this morning, by the way, take one of my cards, will you and make your husband vote for me'."

"Did you play any games or have any races? What kind of entertainment was there?"

"Yeh, there were corn shelling races. Those races were a lot of fun for the youngsters. Then the boys had—what do you call 'em?—relays.

"The women fixed the lunch on the ground and just about time it was ready to be served up came a rain. People scurried for their wagons and buggies. Most of them got under the wagon sheets and smothered while the usual Fourth of July rain ruined the lunch.

"As most rains will, this one stopped and all the people came from cover to eat the soggy cakes and pies. They all tasted good and the lemonade was wonderful even though it was slightly watery. After dinner the folks sang songs. Then the men gathered around to hear the candidates speak while the women cleared up the remains of the lunch.

"'Friends, as most of you know, I am a candidate for tax collector. I assure you that if you vote for me you will never want to vote again. I will appreciate your vote and influence.'

"I can just hear old Sam saying, 'You know, he's a right smart feller. I believe he would make a good tax collector. Don't you think we ought to vote for him?'

"They didn't use fire works much on the Fourth of July in those days. Sometimes the young boys had small firecrackers. They never had large ones except on Christmas. Firing cannons and making a lot of racket with firecrackers was unheard of on that day."

"They tell me that the Declaration of Independence was usually read at these celebrations, is that true?"

"Yep, they always read it. Some smart lawyer would get up and read it while all the mothers punched their kids trying to keep them awake and hear the paper. After the lawyer finished reading, he would make a little speech on patriotism.

"Picnics of this sort were all day and part of the night affairs. A dance was scheduled for the evening entertainment. The best fiddlers in the country gathered and played for the square dances. These lasted on into the night. Voices of 'swing your partner' could be heard miles away."

"Celebrations today are not so very different from those then, are they? They still have picnics and races and at night there always is a big dance."

Breaking horses was not uncommon in the days of 1880 but now a rodeo is something unusual and people drive miles around to watch the fun. The races have changed. There used to be relays now there are balloon and airplane races. One plane has been in the air for days racing against time while forty years ago boys raced against boys for honors. The dances of the Fourth are sometimes marathon races with good jazz bands urging the dancers on with their rhythm.

Political round ups and meetings still hold the place of honor for Independence Day. The years roll by but people and their celebrations vary little.

Dallas Detective Has Fishing Yarn All of His Own

DALLAS, July 3, (INS)—Mack Patterson, Dallas detective, is back from a fishing trip with a fish story of his own.

With a party of friends, Patterson was night fishing for snakes, holding a small electric bulb in the water to attract reptiles and shooting them with a shotgun.

A large bass came up for a look at the bulb and at the same time a watermoccasin swam toward the bass.

Patterson let go with both barrels of the gun, the explosion sending the fish and the snake out of the water into the boat.

Not knowing the snake was killed, Patterson jumped into the lake.

5 STRAIGHT ROADS

We want to touch state highway No. 49 at 5 different points if you please.

First, let us to Clarksville, Mt. Pleasant and Paris via Bogata. A good natral road bed most all the way to Bogata, then we have highways 49 and 66 to 3 of our nearest county sites.

Second, may we have a straight road in a northeast course to Ben Tidwell's, and thence north to Deport? Very few bridges.

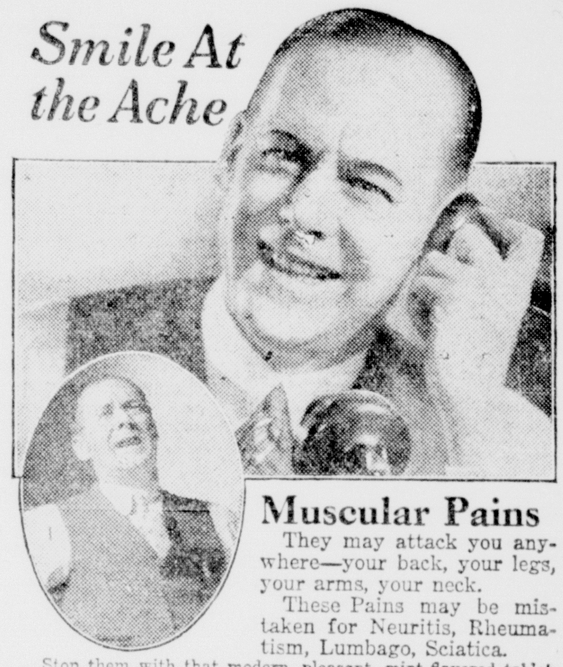

Third, can we travel due north 8 miles on a back bone to mile post 14 out of Paris on No. 49, our closest contact to a hard road?

Fourth, please sir, let us pass in a N. W. course via Minter and near Milton to Pattonville on 49. Will skip lots of worn out culverts and cut off miles of distance.

Fifth, it would be so nice to touch No. 49 at 8 mile post from Paris. Not necessary to have more than 4 feet water passway. It's necessary to save all the car shocks and gasoline bills that we can these hard times.
